Commentary (as of September 30, 2017)Market Synopsis

During the third quarter, China's Manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index ("PMI") reached its 5-year high of 52.4. Economic growth was on track to reach its target of 6.5%. Chinese companies listed on the Hong Kong stock exchange and abroad continued their rally from the start of the year with the Hang Seng crossing the 28,000 marks in August. During the third quarter, consumer price index ("CPI") rose year-over-year basis due to non-food items, while producer price index ("PPI") moderated from its peak since the first quarter.

Year-to-date, the Hong Kong ("H-Shares") market outperformed its global peers while it continued to maintain an attractive valuation. The H-Shares Market experienced consolidation in September due to geopolitical risk from the North Korea conundrum.

Market Outlook and Investment Strategy

The 19th National Party Congress in October 2017 was a significant event that provided clarity and confidence on the continuity of the China's political regime and policies. The Sub-Adviser expects the outcome to help continue the economic and regulatory policies implementation those were introduced in earlier 12 months period. The focus is expected to reduce the potential systemic risks, maintain stability in the financial system, implement state reforms, and improve capital efficiency within the financial markets. In addition, there would be a strong and renewed focus on the environment and healthcare. These features are expected to be consistent with the earlier reform proposals.

The Sub-Adviser remains confident and optimistic about the Chinese equity market. The H-Shares market trades at around its 10-year historical price earnings average and is currently one of the most attractively valued global markets. The Sub-Adviser expects that over the next 12 months period, projected earnings will maintain its double-digit growth. Some leading companies in the technology and consumers sector are expected to reach a growth rates of 30%.

The Sub-Adviser believes in continuing its investment strategy of maintaining core holdings in mid-to-large cap growth stocks and hold companies that have the financial strength to innovate new technologies and products, as well as the capabilities to consolidate market share from small players.
